

Emphasis on Getting Education

There are different policies for governments to encourage people to have an educated society. Some experts assert that in some countries people are under pressure to be educated and those governments should spend money on leisure time activities for young people. This statement will be supported through this essay and its merit will be analyzed analysis by looking at how emphasis on getting education can result in neglect of other aspects of life and investing in leisure time activities can solve part of the issues.

It is argued that emphasis on a particular item can lead society to some issues/challenges, and it can be also seen in the educational system. For instance, people being ~~people~~ under pressure to become educated not only can be counterproductive creates revers trends about education in society, but also will not allow people to think about other aspectss of life. Thus, too much emphasis on getting education does not assist society.

Investment in leisure time activities is one of the solutions that governments can take into account to remedy the effects of emphasis of education on society, such as establishing amusement and art centers and gyms in educational centers. These actions help students to keep balance between their study and leisure activities,, on the other hand,, it also encourages young people to have more attention to on educational centers.

After investigation into the impacts of putting making pressure on people for getting education, it is believed that this emphasis will have reversee effect on society and to remedy this situation the government should spend money on leisure time activities.

